

Woman, 'Ordinair'
October 1998
By Alice N. Friday

I'm just an ordinary woman
That you can plainly see.
Tune your hearts, ears and eyes
And take a long look at me.
I'm the mother of my children;
The listener to their woes;
I rejoice when they are happy;
I even share their chores.

I'm the loving wife and homemaker;
I toil on a job day after day!
I rush home to prepare the daily meal
And my family's well being is my pay.
I wash and fold the laundry
While planning the agenda for the next day.
I note the appointments on the calendar;
To meet them, I figure out a way.

I am the faithful Health Care provider
Who is evermore in demand;
I'm an accountant, a programmer, an educator
Who is willing to lend a helping hand.
I'm a business owner, financial planner, and a facilitator;
The local sales person on the daily trail.
I am your determined office worker
Who process many requests without fail.

I'm the driver of the bus and van;
The attorney who litigates your case.
I am your trusted physician
The technician who maintains your place.
I am an executive in a major company
Traveling the country for miles and miles
While pondering important decisions
That affect your and my lives.

I am a sister in a national sorority,
Who share many important creeds,
To up-lift the downtrodden and broken
With their educational needs.
I am a mentor, a counselor, and a retired volunteer
Assisting the imprisoned, youth and elders so dear.
I am a faithful member that sings in the choir
Praising my Savior to draw Him near!

I'm a Steward, Stewardess and a Trustee, dedicated to serve;
The Missionary worker giving more and more.
I am the Minister who delivers the Word
And I am the usher who stands at the door.
I am the student so eager to learn,
Reading the Bible each and every day;
Seeking power, truths and guidance
To help me on my Heavenly way.

I am the silent worker
Who remains behind the scene;
It's not what you see me do
But what my work really means.
I'm just an ordinary woman
Trying to do the best I can.
My goal is to praise my Savior
By the deeds I do for my fellowman.

Yes, I just an ordinary Woman
Trying to live a Christian life;
I help the sick and needy
As they face this world of strife.
One day I hope to be rewarded
For the good I do from day to day.
My Savior Jesus Christ has the master plan
To give His servants extraordinary pay!
